WELCOME

By Theodore L. Provo, President

All of us at Greenfield Community College are delighted to welcome both new and returning students for the fall term. It has been a busy summer as programs to beautify the campus and update the academic needs of the College have continued.

The new sign at the entrance, the long safety walk for walkers, joggers and bicycle riders, the physical fitness course parallel to the safety walk, the benches where you can rest, the tables and umbrellas on the terrace and the flowers at the entrance improve the campus.

The Art Department has updated its photography laboratory and a major academic computer center has been developed in the north wing. The Wang, the Data General and the Apple computers make the Greenfield Community College facilities second to none. We are certainly in the new technological age, and I hope you will take advantage of all the equipment that the College has to offer.

Also, I hope each of you will have the opportunity to meet Dr. Bryan Blanchard, the new academic dean, and the several new faculty and technical and clerical personnel. They join the College staff to work with you and to reach your goals.

The real task is, of course, up to you. The college can provide the equipment and the faculty and staff can provide the know-how and the encouragement, but the dedication, drive and willingness to work are in your control. We at the College will be happy to assist you, so do not hesitate to call on us.

Best wishes for your success and happiness.

GCC Awarded Software Grant

By GCC NEWS

Greenfield Community College has been awarded a software grant from Autodesk, Inc. of Sausalito, CA which will greatly expand the College's capabilities in CAD (computer-aided drafting) instruction. The award includes AutoCAD software, which is the largest selling CAD package for microcomputers, along with additional training aids. The software will be installed on IBM-compatible microcomputers in the College Micro-CAD Laboratory and in the newly remodeled Academic Computer Center so that four workstations for AutoCAD will be available for students in the drafting courses. During the fall semester, engineering science and electronics technology students in EGR 107 (Engineering Graphics I) will be learning drafting skills manually and be exposed to the AutoCAD system as well. In the spring semester, students electing EGR 108 (Engineering Graphics II) will be trained to use AutoCAD and other microcomputer-based CAD packages. In addition, those in the College's new Computer-Aided Drafting Certificate program will be working in a project course using the AutoCAD system.

THE LEARNING CENTER It Could Make All The Difference

By Garrett McAuliffe, Director of Learning Assistance Programs

1. You've signed up for a load of courses, but you really aren't sure what career direction you'd like to pursue.

2. You're enthusiastic about school and willing to learn, but you just don't remember what you read, don't retain what's said in class, and don't do your best on exams.

3. You're not all enthusiastic about school, or about much else at this point, and it's hurting your schoolwork and maybe your relations and your self-confidence.

4. You're confident about a few courses, but you know that one or two others are going to be tough for you.

If you never expect to run into any of the situations just described, you needn't read any further. However, at least one of these is true for just about all college students. The staff and programs of GCC's Learning Center are aimed at enabling you to learn the skills and develop the attitudes that success in college, career and your personal life require. Every year about 80% of the students at GCC have some contact with Learning Center programs during their stay here. We have found that students who utilize the courses, tutoring, and counseling that are available in the learning center are more likely to stay in college and succeed. At this point I expect that most of you will stay with me to the end of this article.

We can assume that most students enter college with good intentions and some purpose in mind (even if the purpose is to find a purpose!). We in the Learning Center have found that students don't, however, automatically march through the mine-field of lectures, papers, exams and other demands without a few pauses, doubts, and anxieties. Nor are most students fully armed with the basics: good habits and bottom-line reading, writing, and mathematics skills needed for goal achievement. And even when those "academic" skills are achieved, many aren't sure what they'd like to do with all this learning! I'll let you in on a little secret: successful students are made, not born. And you can "make" yourself into one if you recognize your needs (Remember those questions we asked you when you took Placement tests? We hope they helped you identify those needs.) Here's a rundown on some of those needs and suggestions for how to work on them. Oh, if they don't feel like needs now, wait a few weeks, or months.

Save this article, OK?

Student Needs

—Help in learning almost any subject taught in the college.

—Developing career plans.

—Learning good "study skills" (reading and remembering, taking exams, sticking to it, etc.)

—Working on feelings of doubt, concerns about family or other relationships, changing personal habits, dealing with sexuality, etc.

Who/What to See or Do

Meet a tutor.

Take the Career Planning Course (HUD 109, 2 credits) or see a career counselor.

Take the Study Skills course (HUD 101, 1 credit), or see a learning assistant (a special tutor who is a specialist in study skills)

See one of the college counselors to explore these issues.

Take the Stress Management Course (HUD 117, 2 credits)

These are just a few highlights of the activities of the Learning Center (or of the "Learning Assistance Programs", as we say when we get fancy). Come up to the 4th floor in the Center of the building to ask questions or to make an appointment. We're looking forward to meeting you - all 80% of you.

CELEBRATE! Growing Older

By GCC NEWS

Recreational, educational and cultural events will mark the six-week long "Celebration of Growing Older," sponsored by Greenfield Community College and the Greenfield Community College Foundation throughout September and October.

Scheduled for kickoff at the Franklin County Fair September 5, the goal of the "Celebration" is to make people think about their attitudes toward growing older, and to educate both young and old about the issues facing the elderly.

Major events include an appearance by U.S. Representative Barney Frank and his mother, Mrs. Elsie Frank, Saturday, September 28 at 1 p.m. Mrs. Frank is an elder advocate and president of the Mass. Association of Older Americans. She is an eloquent and often humorous speaker on the rights of the elderly. There is no admission charge for this event.

On Sunday, September 22, from 1-4 p.m., seniors are invited to attend the grand opening of the Greenfield Community College Fun and Fitness Trail, an 18-station exercise course designed to put fun into physical conditioning. Representative Carmen Buell will attend the opening festivities.

Nationally known impersonator William McLinn will perform "Mark Twain Speaks on the Golden Years," Thursday, October 17 at 7:30 p.m.

"The Graying of America" is the topic of a lecture by consumer spokeswoman Helen Leonard on Thursday, October 24, in the Greenfield Community College Music and Drama Performance Room S01 at 3:30 p.m.

On Saturday, October 26, seniors are invited to join the interested members of the college community on a trip to Boston's Museum of Fine Arts to view the Renoir exhibition. A preliminary evening lecture on "Renoir's Painting in His Later Years" will be scheduled before the trip. The bus will depart GCC at 8 a.m., and return at 7 p.m. The cost for transportation and admission is $17. For more information on this trip, contact Joan Rising in the Art Department at 774-3131, ext. 311.

A senior film festival is being co-sponsored by the GCC Student Activities Office on Tuesdays' September 17 through October 29 at 12:30 p.m. The films will be shown in room C129. The opening presentation will be the film "Root Hog or Die," an award winning documentary filmed in Western Massachusetts and southern Vermont. The film focuses on older people and their experiences growing up and living in the country.

Many of the "Celebration's" programs will also be available for use by senior centers, schools and civic groups that are interested in having a speaker attend their meeting. Available programs include a performance of scenes from "The Gin Game," by GCC theater director Jim Godwin and his wife. Also available is a presentation by former GCC professor Virginia Low on Women and Aging in Literature; "Media
